

ILPD NEWSLETTER JULY-SEPTEMBER 2026

ILPD Equips Prosecutors to Tackle Human Trafficking

A five-day specialised training program aimed at strengthening prosecutors' capacity to identify, investigate, and prosecute cases of trafficking in persons (TIP)—with a strong focus on victim protection and effective prosecution—was held at the Institute of Legal Practice and Development (ILPD) from 28th September to 2nd October 2026. Read More

ILPD and AIMS Partner to Harness Mathematics and AI for Legal Development

Through this partnership, ILPD and AIMS aim to demonstrate how collaboration between legal and mathematical sciences can generate practical solutions to contemporary challenges in law and justice. The partnership also reflects a growing recognition that the future of legal practice will require professionals who can work effectively across disciplines, combining legal knowledge with data, technology, and scientific evidence. Read More

ILPD Empowers Mushirarungu Primary School Teachers with Advanced Pedagogy and Library Management Skills

The Head Teacher of Mushirarungu Primary School, Adrien Rutagarama, said that the knowledge and skills acquired during the training would help teachers continue supporting students to achieve better academic results.

He said, "In particular, the training helped teachers refresh their understanding of how to improve their teaching practices, which ultimately benefits students by enabling them to perform better in their studies."

Read More

ILPD Revamps Its Curriculum to Develop Competent and Well-Rounded Legal Professionals

"We have revised our curriculum so that we can train legal professionals who understand that the citizen must be at the center of justice delivery. Justice is served in the name of the citizen, as provided by law. Therefore, judges, prosecutors, advocates, and investigators need to understand that the citizen is the person we serve, and our training must reflect that," the Rector said.

Read More

ILPD Puts Arbitration at the Heart of Rwanda's Next Generation of Legal Practitioners

"We wish that arbitration may cease to be regarded as an arcane or esoteric specialism the province of a few and instead be understood as an indispensable component of commercial justice," Dr. Karimunda stated. Read More